Using NoodleBib for your Works Cited

1. From the PC Library homepage http://www.phoenixcollege.edu/library, click on “NoodleBib” under “Popular Links.”

2. Sign into NoodleBib, entering the personal ID and password you previously set up, and clicking the Sign In button:

3. Next, click on the button Create a New Project at the top, right side of the screen:

4. Select the citation style your instructor has asked you to use for your project (MLA, APA, or Chicago/Turabian). Next, click the Advanced option. Name your paper or project and place it in the description box, then click on the Create Project button:
5. Next, in the box labeled Components click on Works Cited or References:
6. From the drop down box, select the type of source you are adding to your list (book, magazine, journal article, web site, etc.), then click on the button Create Citation.
For each source you cite, you need to answer a series of questions, selecting the Continue button until all the questions you can answer are completed. Anything you are required to answer has an * next to it.
7. As you type information into the different fields, NoodleBib will automatically check for common errors with capitalization, abbreviations, and more. If a yellow warning triangle appears to the right of a field, mouse-over the triangle to view suggestions for how to correct the potential problem.

8. When finished answering all the questions for the source, click the Submit button.

9. Once you have entered all your sources into your MLA Works Cited (or References), you can export your sources to Word, Google Docs, or preview as a webpage. You can then print your citations, too. Use the Print/Export button:

Your citation lists will remain saved in your account under your Projects, until you delete them.
